Western Kathiawar Semi-Jurisdictional States and Non-Jurisdictional States

Semi-jurisdictional states were in direct relations with the British Political Agent. The criminal and civil jurisdiction in these states was shared by the ruler and the British. All semi-jurisdictional rulers were non-salute. The precedence among rulers of these states was held by Jasdan by the degree of jurisdiction.

^{*} The states whose rulers were represented at the Chamber of Princes (1921-1947) as of 1947 are indicated by the state names in bold. The states under Muslim rulers are indicated by Italicized state names. Only the rulers formerly represented at the Chamber (except of Manavadar) were covenanting founders of Saurashtra in 1948, other states were annexed to Saurashtra.

Non-jurisdictional states, referred to as talukas, were organized in circles (Thanas) under the control of the British Deputy Political Agent represented in each Thana by a Thanadar in exercise of jurisdiction and revenue collection. The criminal and civil jurisdiction in the talukas was assumed by the British on behalf of the taluka rulers, still the talukas remained outside of the British India.

^{} The classes of jurisdiction were defined in 1866 and abolished in 1925, but the graded jurisdiction remained. Only the 3rd-5th classes are noted (characterized by the right to apply imprisonment up to 7, 3 or 2 years), the 6th and 7th classes (characterized by the right to apply imprisonment for less than 6 months) are omitted here (the 1st and 2nd class state rulers were fully jurisdictional salute rulers).

^{} These states were separated from the old Jetpur state (Jetpur Majmu) in a process that was completed in 1937 by ending of joint ownership of the state.

^{*} Population of individual talukas in 1931 in thousands indicated by number in parentheses after name of taluka if population exceeded 1 thousand.

^{} The talukas under Muslim rulers are indicated by Italicized state names.
